

Dr. Kellie Murphy’s Telehealth Consent for Georgia and Other States

In addition to having licensure to practice psychology with clients in Georgia, Dr. Murphy has also obtained an authorization to practice interjurisdictional telehealth from the Psychology Interjurisdictional Compact (PsyPACT). PsyPACT is an agreement among the psychology licensing boards of different US states and territories, allowing psychologists to practice telehealth across jurisdictional lines.

Legally, the location of any psychology telehealth appointment is where the client is, not where the psychologist is. In signing this consent form, you are agreeing to be in one of the following US states or territories at the time of any telehealth appointment. This list will be updated as more states and territories join PsyPACT, and this consent will include all active PsyPACT states and territories.
